G.W.U. IS READY FOR GEORGETOWN

Local Rivals Trying Hard for Big Game.

PLAY BALL ON SATURDAY

on Sick List-Drennan and Hutchinson May Do the Twirling.

With but two more days for practice George Washington and the Georgetown baseball teams are working with might and main to get into the finest condition possible for the big game Saturday afternoon. George Washington plays a practice game this afternoon with the team from the Department of Justice, while Georgetown lays Walbrook Athletic Club at Baltimore. Tomorrow and Friday will be devoted to special practice.

Bradley Will Catch. Captain Bradley has decided to go behind the bat, and his catching will greatly strengthen the playing of the Hatchetites. Bradley's throwing arm has come around in great shape, and is for the champion Fourth Presbyterians in the Sunday School league. Stevenson, who has been catching most of the games, will play one of the outfield the games, will play one of the outfield positions.

Weber has been on the hospital list for two or three days, as the result of a spiking received in the Georgia game. Under the careful treatment of the university hospital physicians, however, he will be out for practice by tomorrow. Orrison will play third base. His work in practice is improving greatly, and Captain Bradley feels that that part of the infield which has given him so much trouble all season will be well taken care of in Saturday's game.

Hutchinson in Form.

The Buff and Blue are carefully grooming Hutchinson, their star southpaw, for the game. "Hutch" is in fine form now, and will doubtless be at his best if he is called on to pitch against the Blue and Gray.

Coach O'Hara has not decided whom he will pitch against the downtown collegians. If Larry Drennan is in condition he will be on the firing line for Georgetown. In case he is not in shape Mayock or Montgomery will probably be selected.

Technical High School started in the interhigh championship baseball season well yesterday afternoon at Van Ness Park by defeating the Eastern High contingent by 9 to 8.

The closeness of the score but shows the difficulty the Manual Training stu-dents had in taking the game from the Capitol Hill lads who were thought to be easy pickings, but who on the contrary began things with a rush, and be-fore the close of the first had a lead which they kept until the last half of seventh, when the good thing ex-led by 7 to 3, but in that session Dodd let down slightly and Field, who had been on first, tried to pull the Light of Blue and White out of the hole by Blue and White out of the hole by changing places with the little southpaw. After forcing in three runs by bases on balls, however, Dodd went in again, but not until the Maroon and Gray had tallied four times. They got one more over before the side was out. Tech got the winning run in the eighth, and Eastern, though rallying bravely in the last, could do po better than cross the plate once. Up to the seventh Dodd had the better of the bargain with Sterzer, who has been touted as a high school wonder, but after the latter had warmed to his work he pitched good ball, and fielded his position well. Arthur Richardson, in center, and his brother, at third, took the fielding honors. Meyers' two-bagger in the seventh, scoring Kneessi, was the feature from the Technical standpoint. The source of the bird state of the third Herbert had the crowd buffaloed. They couldn't just make up their minds whether he was hunting for a bird's past in the trip to the trip to the provide seat of the seventh of the plate on the seventh bodd had the better of the bargain with Sterzer, who has been touted as a high school wonder, but after the latter had warmed to his work he pitched so the provided as a bird and so minutes.

The Eckington baseball aggregation lost to the Bloomingdale nine yesterday afternoon by 9 to 6.

Lave Cross had a chance to score with Hickman on Anderson's hit in the first round, but in steaming along from second to third he encountered Brouthers. The youngster jogged along also, but at a slow rate and effectually blocking our veteran. Lave tried to pass him at third but stubbed his toe on the bag and fell sprawling. He made a roar to Sheridan about being interfered with, but the umpire couldn't see it that way. Stahl burst upon the scene, but before he could emit so much as one little peep Sheridan yelled: "You kick as much as one word and I'll put you out." Our born leader faded away.

twenty hits were made in all by Mack's braves, and maybe there were me more. That's going some in the matter of bum pitching. Sudhoff was the last Bartley and a single by Hartsel came bunched together in a group all at once and another run was counted.

Nill's Ascension.

Nill achieved in that fateful fifth the proud distinction of making two errors, both costly. In the ninth round he threw wildly in taking the return from Anderson on Bartley's triple, which landed Bartley at home, and in the fourth inning he and Schlaffy each managed to make a misplay.

Besides banging our pitchers to death, the Athletics made our catchers look foolish. They stole eight bases, three being taken by Davis and two by Monte

Is it wise to let a good one go by to take a chance in drawing a pass? In the first inning Schlaffly had three balls and Nill was on first. Plank sent a straight and slow ball over the plate. It was a cinch, but Schlaffly refused to hit it—as Plank expected. He then fanned and Nill was doubled at second trying to steal on the third strike. Hartsel showed the wisdom of the other policy the day before by making a triple when Falkenberg gave him an easy one over the plate after three balls. It was a foolish game, anyhow. Plank was the only Athletic who didn't get a hit, and all except Bartley and Powers got at least two. Danny Murphy got four, one of them a double.

No Silver Lining to This Cloud.

Washington was absolutely to the bad team kept his head a minute, and when the Athletics had men on bases it was a comical but doleful sight to see the way the Nationals became rattled and nd childish things.

In the fifth inning, with Murphy on Arthur J. Willis, a tire expert of Akron, Ohio, gives some good advice on the care of automobile tires. He says that care should be taken to inflate the tires just enough so that when the car is loaded with passengers the weight will not cause the tires to bulge out on the side but very slightly. With too much bulging on the sides the tires will be flattened and thereby weakened by long driving.
